Overview

Law, a social institution, is as old as the human history itself. From Western Europe and North America to East Asia, if laws are transparent, ensuring freedom for citizens and enforcing the authorities' responsibility, it will contribute to reliable and predictable government interventions. Through these channels law becomes necessary for social stability and development.

From the beginning of Đoi moi (renovation) up to the present, law has played a very important role in Vietnam. A system of law has been formed and contributed to a significant change in economic, political and social life. Through the judicial system public policies are made, enforced and implemented with public participation.

This course discusses the relationship between law and public policy. It is divided into two parts. Part I provides the points of view and theoretical framework to understand the social function of law, its importance in development, the process of legislation and discussion on the quality assessment of law. Part II applies that theoretical framework to some fields of basic law of market economy, focusing on property law, contract law and law solves the disputes, establish justice among the subjects in markets.

Specific points of view and theoretical frameworks will be introduced to enable an in depth analysis and assessment of the legal system. Through discussions of the legal field and case studies students will be gradually familiarized with the tools and skills necessary to evaluate the relationship between public policy and the specific areas of the legal system which are relevant to civil servants.

Course objectives:

By completing this course, students will be better able to:

- Discuss the role of the legal system with regard to public policy, especially its contribution to the development of a strong and efficient country,
- Recognize the rules of the legislative procedure and the relationship between public policy and law shown in this procedure,
- Develop the points of view, necessary methods and skills to evaluate the quality of law relating to a concrete area of public policy such as assuring fair property law, freedom of contract, free competition, and setting up a transparent and accessible system to resolve conflicts in a lawful orderly manner.

Course requirements:

Students are required to read the suggested books and articles, lecture notes, and legal documents, and to participate in class discussions and group work.

There will be no final exam. Grades will be determined by three parts as follows:

- | | |
|--|-----|
| 1. Summary of weekly readings (05 summaries): | 40% |
| 2. Presentation and student seminars (03 short seminars, 1 final seminar): | 40% |
| 3. Class participation: | 20% |

1) Summaries of weekly readings, 40 % of overall grade

Each week students will be required to submit a one-page typed paper (700 words max) discussing issues raised in the required readings. The written discussion must be submitted both a hard copy (in the box in the lab room) and an electronic copy (to Nguyen Thi Nhung) prior to 8.20 am every Tuesday. In total, there are 05 summaries of weekly readings.

2) Presentations and student seminars, 40 % of overall grade

To apply the knowledge learned to the reality of industry or to students own working areas, students have to participate in one of twelve research groups, each group includes four to five students. The group objective is to complete a short seminar evaluating the legal enforcement and implementation, foreseeing the opportunities, challenges in making law in the narrow area of government management that the group members are interested in. By participating in groups, students should discuss the role of law with regard to development, determine necessary changes in law for an efficient intervention and regulation of government in the narrow area selected. The process of group work is as follows:

04/12/2012: Submit the registered topics and assign work items to group members (make the list, names of selected area, assign work items, plan research objectives (not more than two pages).

11/12/2012: Submit the outlines assessing the real legal situation of the industry, area selected (not more than two pages)

27/12/2012: Submit the preliminary report of selection of legal issues under consideration or the new enforcement of the industry selected and the discussed criteria (not more than three pages).

Morning and afternoon of two days, 21/01 and 22/01/2013: Presentation of groups, each group takes about 60 minutes including not more than 20 minutes for the presentation, then 30 minutes for comments, questions, and answers, and 10 minutes for the evaluation of the whole class and teaching team members.

05/02/2013: Submit the assessment of the process of making and implementing law in the selected area, (no less than 10 pages, there is no maximum page limit, including summary and detailed contents).

The regulations for submitting the registration, preliminary report, and last report is as same as the weekly written discussions.

The Teaching Team will also be available during office hours for consultation on essay topics and progress. The group study is graded as follows: (i) doing assignments as scheduled 10%, (ii) hand in assignments as scheduled 10%, (iii) presentation including the answers in class 50%, (iv) content of the last report 30%.

3) Preparation and class participant, 20 % of overall grade.

This course combines lectures and case analysis. Students are provided a part of the lectures and case discussion. The number of discussion hours will be increase towards the end of the course. Students will be assessed by their preparation participation in class discussions.
